

The Cat Worship System | Jollie's Proposal

My website is a science corporation informing and warning the public of cat domination. Although cats are affectionate animals who make wonderful companions, this is not what these adorable cats desire. Cats seek the same level of worship as they had in ancient Egypt. "Crazy cat ladies," according to many, are just that- crazy. However, these individuals have been infected with toxoplasmosis, which is spread by cats who wish to turn their humans into the true "pet." With multiple cats in their home and frequently topping double digits, these crazy cat owners are one of the worst cases of toxoplasmosis. As they take in more and more cats, they establish a home base for one of them, which gives them control over this human. If you have a cat, it's already too late, toxoplasmosis is already in your system, and it will soon develop into your bloodstream reaching your brain.

Toxoplasmosis is a real-world "disease" that scientists discover affects rats when encountering cats. The fictitious truth of my project would be this real harmless infection to the extreme where cats want to be worshipped like they used to be. In Egyptian history, cats were worshipped; their goddess, Bastet, has the head of a cat. They believed cats bring protection, fertility, and home. Cats believe they were better off in this time area, but as time went on, cats became resentful as humans have lost that connection with them. Cats today are abandoned, abused, neglected, and used as decor. There is also a concept going around in the media called the "Cat Distribution System." They believe that a cat will come to you when the world believes you are ready for a cat. I would love to re-frame this concept to prove my "cat domination" point; this is how cats are distributed around the world.

My website will be a corporation against this cat domination, to inform and take action. I would love the founder to be an ex-crazy cat lady who found a cure for toxoplasmosis and using her experience and research formed a team to stop the cat apocalypse before it's too late. If this was a real website and a real concept this corporation would be a group of lame cat haters but in my fictional reality, they are heroes. I would like this website to be unique to make this "threat" feel truly extreme.

I'm personally interested in this subject because I am a crazy cat lady! I had seven cats at once, unfortunately losing one recently, and now own six cats. If this were a real situation, I would be one of the worst cases of the infection and you know what, I would be more than okay with that. I love cats and I worship them, and they altered my brain that way because I used to be the biggest dog person five years ago. Then I met my girlfriend's cats, and I had a switch. A year later, I got two cats. I love them with all my heart, and I feel horrible for all the neglected, abused, and abandoned kitties out there. I wish I could take them all in and give them a home and if they are making me think that with some crazy disease, I would not mind.

The benevolent untruth to my fictitious truth would probably be to protect cats and avoid hoarding situations. By making people believe that cats purposely make you want to get more cats, humans learn their limits and stop when they must. This avoids neglected, abandoned, and hoarded cats.
